

Notes on People

Phillip Agee yesterday lost his last-ditch fight to be allowed to live in the Netherlands. The Dutch State Council, the Government's highest advisory body, turned down the former Central Intelligence Agency operative's request to suspend a previous Government decision that he be expelled as a risk to international relations. His lawyer said the council action meant that Mr. Agee must leave Holland by the end of the month. He has already been expelled from Britain and France, and West Germany has refused his entry. Mr. Agee is the author of a book that described C. I. A. operations.
